Why do you think the boy says he is like a lump of clay or blank canvas when he comes into the barbershop?

How does the boy feel that a new haircut will change his day at school tomorrow?

What does the boy think about the men surrounding him in the chairs?

How does the boy say he feels after a new haircut?
Why is the money you spend at the barber always worth it?

How is the sting of the green alcohol described as a good thing instead of something that is bad?

What is something that makes you feel as good as the boy does in this story?

How does a new haircut or hairstyle make you feel?
