

Metaphors

Owen was an eating machine,
consuming more than 3,000
calories a day.

A blanket of snow fell on the small town making it look very peaceful.

After two years of making bad choices at school Doug turned over a new leaf.

She received a tidal wave of birthday cards last year.

I have so much homework that I am drowning in it!

My uncle can be such a couch potato during March Madness basketball.

My family showered me with gifts on my birthday.

I can't do one more project because I have too much on my plate already.

My memory was foggy and I couldn't remember what happened last year.

The toddler playing at the dining room table with permanent markers was a recipe for disaster.

All of their great ideas were food
for thought.

Tom was boiling mad when his whole family forgot his birthday.

I don't want my son to make the wrong decisions, but I have to give him room to grow.

Her day on the beach was a dream.

The baseball team experienced the sweet smell of success.

The police had to dig up evidence in order to arrest the criminal.

We had a ball at our friend's house this past weekend.

