

START

I have the verb starts.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:
The pink flower smelled
sweet.

I have the common noun
flower.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:
Tiffany kicks the ball gently.

I have the verb kicks.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:
We ate the ripe strawberries.

I have the adjective ripe.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:
Are you missing some socks?

I have the plural noun socks.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:
She likes to clean quickly.

I have the adverb quickly.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:
The girls met at McDonalds.

I have the proper noun
McDonalds.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:
We pass Ohio and Indiana.

I have the verb pass.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:
I drink coffee very slowly.

I have the common noun
coffee.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:
The girls wear pink shirts.

I have the adjective pink.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:
Did you turn on the lights?

I have the plural noun lights.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:
Dr. Seuss is a famous author.

I have the proper noun
Dr. Seuss.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:
The young girl spoke softly.

I have the adverb softly.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:
Did you push the girl down?

I have the common noun girl.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:
The boy's long hair was in his eyes.

I have the adjective long.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:
My niece caught the ball!

I have the verb caught.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:
How many flowers did you
pick?

I have the plural noun flowers.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:
She saw her brother Eric at
the movies.

I have the proper noun Eric.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:
Did you see how slowly Tiffany walked?

I have the adverb slowly.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:
The author was Dr. Seuss.

I have the common noun
author.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:
She cleaned her stinky socks!

I have the verb cleaned.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:

Boys pushed everyone out of the way!

I have the plural noun boys.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:

They carefully set the table.

I have the adverb carefully.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:

Have you met my friend
Tiffany?

I have the proper noun
Tiffany.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:

My grandma gave me an ugly sweater.

I have the adjective ugly.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:

Her little boy was so cute!

I have the common noun
boy.

Who has the verb in this
sentence:

I pushed my brother on the swing.

I have the verb pushed.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:

Her stinky dog was barking at me!

I have the adjective stinky.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:

We used to live in Ohio.

I have the proper noun Ohio.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:

Nora gently brushed the
dog's hair.

I have the adverb gently.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:

She starts her new job on Friday.

START

I have the verb starts.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:
The pink flower smelled
sweet.

I have the common noun
flower.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:
Tiffany kicks the ball gently.

I have the verb kicks.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:
We ate the ripe strawberries.

I have the adjective ripe.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:
Are you missing some socks?

I have the plural noun socks.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:
She likes to clean quickly.

I have the adverb quickly.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:
The girls met at McDonalds.

I have the proper noun
McDonalds.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:
We pass Ohio and Indiana.

I have the verb pass.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:
I drink coffee very slowly.

I have the common noun
coffee.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:
The girls wear pink shirts.

I have the adjective pink.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:
Did you turn on the lights?

I have the plural noun lights.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:

Dr. Seuss is a famous author.

I have the proper noun
Dr. Seuss.

Who has the adverb in this
sentence:

The young girl spoke softly.

I have the adverb softly.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:

Did you push the girl down?

I have the common noun girl.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:

The boy's long hair was in his
eyes.

I have the adjective long.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:

My niece caught the ball!

I have the verb caught.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:

How many flowers did you
pick?

I have the plural noun flowers.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:

She saw her brother Eric at
the movies.

I have the proper noun Eric.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:

Did you see how slowly Tiffany walked?

I have the adverb slowly.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:

The author was Dr. Seuss.

I have the common noun
author.

Who has the verb in this
sentence:

She cleaned her stinky socks!

I have the verb cleaned.
Who has the plural noun in
this sentence:

Boys pushed everyone out of
the way!

I have the plural noun boys.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:

They carefully set the table.

I have the adverb carefully.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:

Have you met my friend
Tiffany?

I have the proper noun
Tiffany.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:

My grandma gave me an
ugly sweater.

I have the adjective ugly.
Who has the common noun
in this sentence:

Her little boy was so cute!

I have the common noun
boy.

Who has the verb in this
sentence:

I pushed my brother on the
swing.

I have the verb pushed.
Who has the adjective in this
sentence:

Her stinky dog was barking at
me!

I have the adjective stinky.
Who has the proper noun in
this sentence:

We used to live in Ohio.

I have the proper noun Ohio.
Who has the adverb in this
sentence:

Nora gently brushed the
dog's hair.

I have the adverb gently.
Who has the verb in this
sentence:

She starts her new job on Friday.